

THE RECORD OF THE ASSOCIATION OF THE BAR OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK

EDITORIAL BOARD

HARRISON TWEED
President

PAUL B. DE WITT
Executive Secretary

WHITMAN KNAFF
Secretary

THE RECORD is published at the House of the Association, 42 West 44th Street, New York, 18.

Volume 2

FEBRUARY, 1947

Number 2

Association Activities

LAST YEAR at the February Stated Meeting the Association adopted a resolution presented by the Committee on Law Reform which instructed the officers and committees of the Association to take action to secure an amendment to Article VI, Section 19, of the Constitution of the State of New York which would extend to certain other judges the constitutional restriction against Judges of the Court of Appeals and Justices of the Supreme Court running for non-judicial offices without resigning.

The Committee on Law Reform was instructed to draft such an amendment, and the committee has now completed work on the draft of a joint resolution proposing such an amendment. The pertinent language of the proposed amendment is printed below:

"The judges of the court of appeals, [and] the justices of the supreme court, the surrogates, the judges or justices of any other court of record, and the judges or justices of any court not of record, other than a justice of the peace or police justice, shall not hold any other public office or trust, except that they shall be eligible to serve as members of a constitutional convention. All votes for any such judges, [or] justices or surrogates of any court of record or not of record, other than a justice of the peace or police justice, for any other than a judicial office or as a member of a constitutional convention, given by the legislature or the people, shall be void."

Matter in italics is new. Matter in brackets is old law to be omitted.

AT THE STATED MEETING on February 11, a number of important amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws will be presented. These were discussed by the President in his letter in the January issue of THE RECORD. Copies of the proposed amendments will be sent to the membership in advance of the meeting.

In brief, the amendments, which relate to classes of membership, seek to accomplish two purposes: (1) To create a new class of members to be known as Auxiliary Members, consisting of persons who have been admitted to the New York Bar for less than three years; and (2) to reduce the admission fee for active members of less than ten years' standing at the bar from $50 to $25. These amendments are in line with the Association's policy of attempting to attract desirable younger lawyers as members.

Other proposed amendments relate to a change of dates of stated meetings and to the organization of committees. The plan in this connection is to eliminate as far as possible the delay in starting the new Association year and to permit the President to begin the work of appointing committees as early as possible in his term.

The third group of amendments relate to the publication of annual reports and to the publication of the memorial book. The proposed amendments make possible the publication of reports on a more flexible schedule which will result in certain printing economies and also, it is believed, in wider publicity for the reports.

In addition to the amendments the meeting will be asked to consider a report of the newly created Special Committee on Federal Courts, of which Edwin A. Falk is chairman. The report deals with the recommendation of the Judicial Conference of Senior Circuit Judges that the statutory prohibition against the filling of the vacancy in the district court for the southern district, caused by the retirement of Judge John M. Woolsey, be repealed. The committee's report and supporting data are published elsewhere in this number of THE RECORD.

There will also be presented a report by the special committee created to consider legislation relating to the adoption of children. This committee, of which the chairman is Andre Maximov, was created by the Executive Committee because the legislation proposed involves the interest of several committees of the Association, all of which are represented on the special committee. The committee's report will be made available to the membership.

Interim reports will be presented by the following committees:

Library Committee

LUCIUS RANDOLPH MASON, Chairman

Committee on Admiralty

WHARTON POOR, Chairman

Committee on Aeronautics

HAMILTON O. HALE, Chairman

Committee on Copyright

BENJAMIN H. STERN, Chairman

Committee on Domestic Relations Court

OSCAR S. ROSNER, Chairman

Committee on Labor and Social Security Legislation

MORRELL S. LOCKHART, Chairman

Committee on the Municipal Court of the City of New York

EDGAR M. SOUZA, Chairman

Committee on Unlawful Practice of the Law

L. REYNER SAMET, Chairman

THE ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE is at work on plans for Association Night to be held sometime in the spring. The chairman of the subcommittee in charge is Samuel Ross Ballin. The subcommittee has asked THE RECORD to make it clear that it is not a closed corporation, and that it will welcome new blood as well as new ideas and new artists. Suggestions should be sent to Mr. Ballin at 15 Broad Street.

JUSTICE FELIX FRANKFURTER will deliver the Sixth Annual Benjamin N. Cardozo Lecture on March 18. Justice Frankfurter's topic will be "Some Reflections on the Reading of Statutes." The Cardozo Lecture was originally scheduled for January 21, but has been postponed to the later date. This necessitates the postponement of the lecture scheduled on that date by Adolf A. Berle, Jr., to a future time. Preceding Justice Frankfurter's lecture a buffet supper will be served at which the guest of the evening will be present.

IN THE JANUARY number of THE RECORD was published the report of the Committee on Law Reform on proposed legislation which would change the statutes of New York relating to the rule against perpetuities. Appended to the report was the tentative draft of a bill to effect the changes recommended by the committee. As a result of numerous suggestions received, the committee has now redrafted the legislation and is printing in this number of THE RECORD the bill which will be recommended to the Legislature. Members interested in supporting the proposals of the committee should communicate with the chairman, Barent Ten Eyck.

A PUBLIC FORUM on "Housing," under the auspices of the Committee on Real Property Law, will be held at the House of the Association on Wednesday, February 19, at 8:00 p.m. Six members of the committee, all recognized experts on housing, will lead the discussion at the forum. The forum will be open to the public, and it will have the support of some twenty community organizations concerned with housing. The speakers and their topics are as follows:

The New York Metropolitan Region

C. MCKIM NORTON

Executive Vice President
Regional Plan Association

The Role of Government in Housing

EDWARD WEINFELD

Former New York State Commissioner of Housing

Urban Redevelopment

JEREMIAH M. EVARTS

Former Assistant Corporation Counsel

Discriminatory Restrictive Covenants

CHARLES ABRAMS

Author of "The Future of Housing"
Professor, The New School of Social Research

Proposed Federal Housing Legislation

CHARLES C. WEINSTEIN

Regional Counsel, National Housing Agency

The Function of Government in Aiding Private Builders

HERMAN T. STICHMAN

New York State Commissioner of Housing

SENATOR PLINY W. WILLIAMSON has introduced in the present session of the Legislature three bills sponsored by the Association which provide that secretaries to New York City Court Justices, to Judges of the New York County General Sessions Court, and to Supreme Court Justices in the first and second districts be lawyers. These are Senate Introductory Numbers 16, 17, and 30.

It will be recalled that Senator Williamson introduced similar legislation in the last session of the Legislature, and that the bills were supported by unanimous press approval and by resolutions of representative civic organizations. It is hoped that this year enactment of this long needed reform will be secured. Members desiring to support the legislation should communicate with Daniel Levy, chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on the City Court which has charge of this legislation.

THE COMMITTEE on Medical Jurisprudence, of which George H. Sibley is the chairman, was represented at a conference on the problems of inebriety sponsored jointly by the New York Academy of Medicine and the Research Council on Problems of Alcohol. John Kirkland Clark, of the committee, addressed the conference on "Penal Problems and the Need for Legislation." The Committee on Medical Jurisprudence will continue its cooperation with the Research Council in this connection, and the committee will also consider legal problems in connection with the care and treatment of the mentally ill.

IN THIS number of THE RECORD is published an address by Harold R. Medina on "Recent Developments in Pleading and Practice." The lecture was given as part of the series of lectures sponsored by the Committee on Post-Admission Legal Education. Over five hundred lawyers heard Mr. Medina deliver the lecture. For some years now these lectures by Mr. Medina have been looked upon by the profession as an invaluable aid to an understanding of the trend of adjective law in this state.

ON FEBRUARY 18 the Committee on Arbitration will conduct a demonstration of arbitration procedures and techniques entitled "From Alpha to Omega in Arbitration," a dramatic presentation by a cast of lawyers invited from the membership of The Association of the Bar, the New York County Lawyers Association, and the American Arbitration Association.

All the incidents and procedure of an actual case, taken from life, from the framing of the arbitration agreement, the emergence of a dispute, to its arbitration, will be developed.

ON FEBRUARY 17 and 18 the Association will be host to delegates from some fifty countries who will meet under the auspices of the American Bar Association. Amos J. Peaslee, a member of the Association, is chairman of the subcommittee in charge of local arrangements for the meeting.

The Calendar of the Association for February

(As of January 15, 1947)

- February 3 Meeting of Section on Labor Law
Dinner Meeting of Committee on the Surrogates' Courts
Meeting of Committee on Uniform State Laws
- February 4 Meeting of Committee on State Legislation Dinner Meeting of Committee on Unlawful Practice of the Law
- February 5 Dinner Meeting of Executive Committee
Meeting of Committee on Trade-Marks and Unfair Competition
Meeting of Section on Wills, Trusts and Estates
- February 6 Dinner Meeting of Committee on Professional Ethics Meeting of Committee on the Municipal Court of the City of New York
Meeting of Committee on Criminal Courts, Law and Procedure
- February 10 Dinner Meeting of Committee on Law Reform
Dinner Meeting of Committee on International Law
- February 11 *Stated Meeting of Association and Buffet Dinner—
6:15 p.m.*
Meeting of Committee on State Legislation
- February 13 Dinner Meeting of Committee on Insurance Law
Meeting of Committee on Criminal Courts, Law and Procedure
- February 18 Meeting of Section on Corporations
Meeting of Committee on Junior Bar Activities
Meeting of Committee on State Legislation
Demonstration of Arbitration Practice and Procedure

- February 19 Forum on Housing
Meeting of Committee on Admissions
Dinner Meeting of Committee on Real Property Law
- February 20 Meeting of Committee on Foreign Law
Meeting of Section on Federal Practice
Dinner Meeting of Committee on Courts of Superior Jurisdiction
Meeting of Committee on Criminal Courts, Law and Procedure
- February 24 Meeting of Library Committee
Round Table Conference preceded by dinner of the Special Committee on Round Table Conferences
- February 25 "Intelligence and Foreign Policy." Address by Major General William J. Donovan. Buffet Dinner, 6:15
P.M.
Meeting of Committee on State Legislation
- February 26 Meeting of Section on Trials
- February 27 Meeting of Committee on Criminal Courts, Law and Procedure
Meeting of Committee on Federal Courts
- February 28 Meeting of Section on Taxation

The President's Letter

To the Members of the Association:

The first Bar Association Twelfth Night Party on January 6th drew something over three hundred participants. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, even the lone brief writer who was lured or driven from a conference room by the music, and good-naturedly added his voice to the melody. There certain opportunities for improvement on future Twelfth Nights were revealed. One lies in restraining the commuters and early retirers from leaving just as the fun is really starting. Those who did not stay for the singing by and with Judge Wallace which lasted until after midnight may have gained a little sleep but missed a rare treat.

The subcommittee of the Committee on Entertainment which has charge of the preparations for Association Night, March 26th, at the Hotel Astor, is hard at work. They have already had some bright ideas and heard from quite a few volunteers for participation. However, they need more ideas and more volunteers. If you know of anyone who has ability in writing, singing or acting, please communicate with Samuel Ross Ballin, 15 Broad Street. The Committee particularly wants tips from members of the ability of other members. If you know of some hidden genius, please turn the spotlight on him.

There will be some serious business at the Stated Meeting on February 11th, as well as a light-hearted buffet supper before it. I hope that the attendance will excel even the gratifying number at the December meeting. The amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws referred to in my letter for January will come before the meeting. There will also be presented the details of the proposed contract for structural alterations in the Association building designed to eliminate the fire hazard and provide for some of the positive and immediate necessities. Finally, there will be several interim reports and recommendations from two special committees for action by the Association.

January 17, 1947

HARRISON TWEED

Recent Developments in Pleading and Practice

BY HAROLD R. MEDINA

For the fourth time it is my privilege to address this Association on the subject of "Recent Developments in Pleading and Practice in the State of New York," prior addresses having been made, after respective intervals of two years, in 1941, 1943 and 1945.¹ Despite the continuance of World War II during a part of the period now under consideration, and despite the confused and chaotic economic conditions which have prevailed since the end of hostilities, the course of procedural reform has run on without abatement, largely due to the painstaking and thorough work of the Judicial Council, in cooperation with various committees of the leading Bar Associations.

From the mass of material thus available it has been difficult to make a choice of subject matter for this address. Some of the changes are so comprehensive that they might well be the subject of separate, detailed discussion. In any event, there has been selected for treatment on this occasion a variety of subjects which it is thought are the most interesting and important. Every lawyer should make it a point to study the text of the new and amended sections of the Civil Practice Act and the new and amended Rules of Civil Practice, referred to below, and also the very comprehensive and detailed reports of the Judicial Council, the Law Revision Commission and other bodies responsible for recommending the various changes.

JURISDICTION OF COURTS

A number of vitally important amendments have been made in the law relating to service by publication, service out of the state in lieu of publication and personal service without the state without an order.

Editor's Note: Mr. Medina, a former chairman of the Executive Committee of the Association, is the author of numerous works in the field of procedure and a frequent contributor to law reviews. He has been Associate Professor of Law at the Columbia University Law School since 1925. The article published here is a lecture delivered by Mr. Medina at the House of the Association under the auspices of the Committee on Post-Admission Legal Education.

SERVICE BY PUBLICATION

Old Section 232 has been repealed and there has been substituted in its place three new sections, Section 232, Section 232-a and Section 232-b. These three new sections respectively define when, against whom and upon what papers an order for service of summons by publication may be made.

Section 232, in describing the actions in which publication may be made sets forth three subdivisions; the first relates to matrimonial cases; the second to actions where the complaint demands judgment excluding defendant from a vested or contingent interest in or lien upon specific real or personal property, and allied matters; and the third to an action for a sum of money only where there has been a levy upon property of the defendant within the state pursuant to a warrant of attachment.

The persons against whom publication may be made, as enumerated in Section 232-a, are largely those specified in the old Section 232. Certain changes, however, require comment. With reference to a resident of the state, Subdivision 7 has been assimilated to the attachment practice by including as a ground for publication the fact that a resident "is about to depart" from the state, so that it is no longer restricted to instances where the resident "has departed" or keeps himself concealed within the state for the purpose of defrauding creditors or avoiding service of summons.

The old provisions relative to domestic corporations are eliminated because of the fact that service, in all cases where the name of the domestic corporation is known, may now be made upon the Secretary of State.

There is an entirely new subdivision (Subdivision 4) which permits publication where the defendant is a domestic corporation "whose name remains unknown to the plaintiff after diligent inquiry, or after diligent inquiry the plaintiff is unable to ascertain whether the defendant is a domestic corporation."

SERVICE OUT OF THE STATE IN LIEU OF PUBLICATION

Section 233 has been clarified by adding the word "Personal" to the title and by including, in the body of the section, the words "in the same manner as if such service were made within the state" so as to bring the language in line with other sections.

PERSONAL SERVICE WITHOUT THE STATE WITHOUT AN ORDER

Here we find the most important of all the changes made in the period under discussion. It is now permitted to serve a resident without the state and without any order permitting such service, as the basis for a personal judgment. This new type of service is only available, however, in actions for a sum of money and in the other types of actions defined in the first and second subdivisions of Section 232 above described, that is to say matrimonial actions and actions involving vested or contingent interests in or liens upon specific real or personal property and allied matters. This provision has been the subject of considerable criticism, based largely upon the supposed hardship to a resident who is thus served in some distant part of the country. While this question of policy may be debatable, it is believed that thoughtful persons will agree that it is decidedly a step in the right direction.

On the subject of power there is not the least shadow of doubt that the new provision is constitutional and in every way valid. The fact that the defendant must be a resident of the state brings this law within one of the traditional bases for personal jurisdiction and the personal service upon the defendant obviously gives him adequate notice and opportunity to defend, so that there can be no question of any deprivation of due process.

Curiously enough some have thought that this exercise of jurisdiction was in some way an innovation. A letter was recently received from a correspondent who had these comments to make.

"The change accomplished by new Section 235 sets up a somewhat new concept in the law of jurisdiction. It stems from the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Milliken v. Meyer (311 U.S. 457) which held that the residence of the defendant within the state issuing process was sufficient to give the courts of the state in personam jurisdiction, irrespective of the fact that process was served beyond the territorial boundaries. This departure from old-fashioned notions of jurisdiction may create a temporary furore but a sensible realization of the needs of the times flowing from the change in the habits of the American people as well as the vast improvement in their methods of transportation from state to state will soon reconcile old-fashioned lawyers to the change."

Even the Judicial Council comments that Section 235 as amended "would take advantage of the decision of Milliken v. Meyer."²

As a matter of fact there is absolutely nothing new about this assertion of personal jurisdiction against a resident. Doubtless the word "resident," in accordance with the interpretation of similar statutes, will be construed as referring to a person domiciled within the state. Both in the Restatement of the Law of Conflicts and in the statements of text writers and in decisions of the courts of this and other states the position has been uniformly taken that service out of the state was a proper basis for personal jurisdiction against one domiciled in the state of the forum, provided there was adequate notice and opportunity to defend.

The bill as proposed by the Judicial Council in 1945 and as passed by the Legislature went one step further.³ It permitted service by publication "where the defendant is a resident of the state, and the complaint demands judgment for a sum of money only." Under the bill as thus recommended and passed it would have been possible to proceed by publication against a resident in an action for a sum of money only, even if there had been no prior attachment and levy. The in personam jurisdiction thus conferred would have been unassailable upon the principles above discussed. Furthermore, the vexing question of whether the then existing sections of the Civil Practice Act should be interpreted as permitting such service would have been put at rest.⁴ This clarification, or expansion of jurisdiction if it be such, seems not to be subject to any serious objection. Objection was made, however, and the Governor vetoed the bill in its entirety,⁵ as this portion was not separately before him. The effect of all this, as a practical matter, is to eliminate the possibility under existing law of serving a resident defendant by publication in an action for a sum of money only without first obtaining an attachment and making a levy thereunder. In view of the present Section 235 above discussed, the overall result would seem to be sufficiently satisfactory.

There is a further question which may be answered by applying the familiar and well established principles which were reaffirmed in the Milliken case. In an action for a sum of money only in which property of defendant has been attached or in a divorce case, Sections 232 and 232-a plainly permit service by publication under certain defined circumstances, against a resident defendant. What is the nature of the jurisdiction thus conferred? Suppose the action is to recover on a $10,000 promissory note, and the property attached is of the value of only $500. The default judgment would be for the full amount and an execution could be levied upon any property of defendant within the territorial limits of the county or countries in which execution was issued. Similarly a default judgment in the divorce case could include alimony and the judgment for alimony would be a valid and enforceable personal judgment. The reason is that defendant in each case is a resident. While Section 232, 232-a and 232-b, relating to service by publication contain no provisions as to the effect of the service, the same may be said of Section 235 and the Sections relating generally to the service of process. Where the constitutional basis for personal jurisdiction exists the courts, in the absence of some special and unusual legislative pattern,⁶ will give the judgment the validity and effect of a personal judgment.

Let us suppose that a summons alone is served upon a resident out of the state pursuant to Section 235, which plainly requires "that a copy of the verified complaint must be annexed to and served with the summons." Suppose the complaint is unverified, or that the summons is served alone and without any complaint whatever. Will such omissions constitute a jurisdictional defect or may they be corrected, with or without an order?

Here we have a question of "jurisdiction" fundamentally different from the one first above discussed. The question now has to do with a self-imposed limitation on jurisdiction, that is to say a limitation not arising out of the Constitution of the United States but imposed by the state of its own accord. As far as power is concerned, the State of New York is doubtless competent through its legislature and its courts to assert personal jurisdiction over one of its domiciliaries without the state, by the service of a summons alone. Accordingly, we have a simple question of statutory interpretation and it is familiar law that matters of policy have great weight in connection with such interpretation. In all probability, the courts of this state would be disposed to take a strict view of the matter and to hold that a failure substantially to comply with the statute was a jurisdictional defect. If such an interpretation were to prevail, a resident defendant out of the state might simply disregard a summons served upon him without a verified complaint annexed thereto, as required by Section 235. He could also, if he chooses to do so, move to set aside the service for failure to comply with the statute. Wherever service of process is void a defendant has this choice of remedies in New York.

A more difficult question would arise if the summons and the verified complaint were separately served or if it were otherwise plain that the complaint was not "annexed" to the summons. If they were both served as part of the same transaction, it seems highly improbable that the courts would consider that the service was in any way defective.

Those disposed to criticize the new provisions of Section 235 foresee controversies over domicile, with the attendant inquiry into intent and bona fides, such as has caused so much trouble in the field of matrimonial litigation since the Williams cases.⁷ Perhaps this may be so; but controversies over domicile present no new or unusual problem. Indeed, the questions presented are identical with those now arising under the sections of the Civil Practice Act relating to attachments and also other sections, such as Section 543 relative to judgments by confession.⁸

It is anticipated that Subdivision 4 of the new Section 232-a will cause some difficulty and confusion. While it is stated that this subdivision will be used principally in actions involving specific interests in real or personal property,⁹ the subdivision contains no such limitation. Furthermore, it would seem not unlikely that attorneys for plaintiffs will have some difficulty in adequately designating the defendant intended and will also find it far from easy subsequently to straighten out the record in order that the ultimate judgment may be properly entered against the defendant intended.

THIRD PARTY PRACTICE

Within the memory of at least a few of those present a misjoinder or defect of parties was subject to demurrer if the defect appeared upon the face of the complaint. The demurrer raised an issue of law, a note of issue was filed and in the course of time this issue was solemnly and separately determined. An appeal not infrequently followed and the whole machinery of justice gradually became pretty well stalled. The strict rule of waiver which applied to a misjoinder or defect of parties if not promptly attacked increased the chaos. Both the bench and bar seemed far more interested in the machinery than in obtaining a clear understanding of the problems of parties and how they should be solved in the interests of justice. This led to constant tinkering with the superficial aspects of the subject, while leaving untouched the central core of ambiguity and uncertainty.

The Judicial Council finally submitted a comprehensive scheme for modernizing the whole subject of Party Practice, based in many particulars upon various portions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. This new procedural device has been adopted in its entirety and is now law.

In the limited time available it is necessary to confine the discussion of details to the new Third Party Practice. One or two observations of a general character may, however, be helpful. Whether or not a defect or misjoinder of parties appears upon the face of a pleading it is no longer necessary to attack such defect or misjoinder within any specified time. Rule 102 now contains two separately numbered subdivisions, the first of which covers the subject of indefiniteness and uncertainty. The second subdivision relates specifically to the subject of what is now called "nonjoinder or misjoinder of parties." One should at once get in the habit of discarding the old terminology of "a defect or misjoinder of parties." This second subdivision defines the motion to be made, provides for a stay of proceedings where circumstances make a stay desirable, permits the use of affidavits where the defect does not appear on the face of the pleading under attack and gives the court discretion to defer the hearing and determination of the motion until the trial. Rule 105, which requires certain motions to be made within twenty days after the service of the pleading to which the motion is addressed, has been amended so as to apply, in the case of Rule 102, only to subdivision 1 relative to indefiniteness and uncertainty. Section 278 has been amended so as to eliminate the automatic waiver in so far as it related to the subject of parties.

The motion under Rule 102 will of course never result in a dismissal. This motion is of a regulatory character. When successfully made it will cause the adversary to serve a new pleading which includes the party or parties improperly omitted or excludes the party or parties improperly joined. Where the order thus made, as a result of a motion under Rule 102, is not complied with, the next remedy is the motion to dismiss. Under the new practice this procedure is governed by Section 193 and Section 190. The latter is an old friend and covers the motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, which has now been appropriately amended to fit into the scheme of the new Party Practice.

So much for preliminaries. Let us now examine with some care the group of provisions which constitute the new Third Party Practice. They constitute a superb piece of draftsmanship and have the virtue of coining new words to define the various categories of parties so that the old ambiguities may in the course of time disappear, while at the same time constructing a new machine sufficiently strong and sufficiently flexible to turn out the work.

Just as in the case of the phrase "substituted service" so in the case of the phrase "third party practice" the words are used sometimes with one meaning and sometimes with another. Thus the expression "third party practice" in a general way means that body of procedural rules which governs the bringing in of third parties either on their own initiative or against their will. It is in this general sense that the phrase is used as a heading for this portion of the address. On the other hand, the Civil Practice Act has now established "third-party practice" in a new, limited and specific way, precisely the same as has been done in the case of "substituted service," which under the Civil Practice Act means a particular and specific kind of "substituted service." In other words "third-party practice" in the limited sense of the Civil Practice Act is the practice defined and set forth in the new Section 193-a, entitled "Third-party practice." The use of the hyphen will perhaps serve to fix this point on one's memory. Accordingly we may start by saying that the practice formerly known as "impleader"—not to be confused with "interpleader" (Sections 285 ff.)—is now known and described as "third-party practice."

Using Third Party Practice in the general sense, the old scheme which was altered by the Legislature in 1946, as above stated, included Section 192 for adding or dropping parties, Section 193, Subdivision 1, for adding parties where necessary for a complete determination of the cause; Section 193, Subdivision 2, for adding parties who are or will be liable over, commonly known as im-pleader; Section 193, Subdivision 3, relative to intervention, which prescribed a method for adding a person not a party on his own application on the ground that he had an interest in the subject matter; and Section 193, Subdivision 4, for adding parties to obtain complete jurisdiction over all owners interested in an action for damages to real property on the application of the person to be held responsible.

The changes in the entire field were accomplished by the repeal of old Section 193 and the enactment of new Sections 193, 193-a, 193-b and 193-c, and ancillary amendments to Sections 180, 192, 264, 278 and 474. Rules 102 and 105 have been amended and a new Rule 54 added.

The new Section 193 contains three subdivisions. Subdivision 1 sets up two categories of parties and defines each category. The first category is of an "indispensable" party, defined as a person whose absence will prevent an effective determination of the controversy, or whose interests are not severable and who would be inequitably affected by a judgment rendered between the parties before the court. The second category is of a "conditionally necessary" party, defined as a person who is not an indispensable party but who ought to be a party if complete relief is to be accorded between those already parties.

Subdivision 2 sets up the procedure for bringing in indispensable and conditionally necessary parties. With respect to an indispensable party, the court must order him brought in. If a party fails or neglects to do so after a reasonable time, the court must dismiss the action without prejudice. With respect to a conditionally necessary party, the court must also order him to be brought in, if he is subject to the jurisdiction of the court and can be brought in without undue delay. However, the court has discretion to proceed without him if his addition would cause undue delay, or if jurisdiction can be acquired over him only by consent or voluntary appearance. If a party fails to bring in a conditionally necessary party after a reasonable period granted to him to do so, the court in its discretion may dismiss the action without prejudice.

Subdivision 3 provides that the section in its entirety shall be applicable to all actions, whether legal or equitable. It will be recalled that old Section 193, Subdivision 1 was only applicable to actions in equity.²⁸

The new Section 193-a contains six subdivisions. It is entitled "Third-party Practice." It is intended to simplify and liberalize what formerly was 193 subdivision 2, and to eliminate therefrom many of the unjustifiable limitations, and much of the confusion found in the construing decisions. Under the old practice, a party was obligated to show that a third person "is or will be liable to such party," and upon such showing he could obtain an order that such third person be brought in. The old practice required an application to the court, and was limited by decisions to a claim which for all practical purposes had to be identical with plaintiff's claim against defendant.²⁹ Since the third party was not a party to the application, he could then apply to the court to re-examine the issue previously determined without him. This often required two applications to the court. Under the new practice a third-party is brought in without any application to the court.

Subdivision 1 provides that after service of his answer, a defendant may bring in a third-party who is or "may be" liable to him, by merely serving a summons and copy of a verified complaint designating himself as "third-party plaintiff," and the new party as "third-party defendant." The only requirement is that the claim against the third-party must be related to the main action by a question of law or fact common to both controversies. This eliminates the old requirement of identity of claim.

Subdivisions 2 to 6 set forth the procedure to be followed after such third-party is brought in. Subdivision 2 permits him to answer the claim asserted against him, and serve copies of his answer upon the third-party plaintiff's attorney and the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days of the service of the third-party complaint upon him. It permits him any defense which he has against plaintiff's original claim, which was not permitted under the old practice. It gives him, for the purpose of contesting plaintiff's claim, all the rights against the plaintiff that any party to an action would ordinarily have, including the right to appeal, another right which he did not have under the old practice.

Subdivision 3 permits plaintiff to amend his pleading to assert against the third-party defendant any claim which plaintiff might have asserted against him originally had he been joined as a defendant. If plaintiff so amends his pleading, the third-party defendant may assert a counter claim against the plaintiff.

All of the foregoing (subdivisions 1, 2 and 3) may be accomplished merely by the service of papers and without application to the court.

Subdivision 4 provides for the first application to the court, and permits the court in its discretion to dismiss the third-party complaint without prejudice, or order a separate trial, or make such other order as may be necessary to further justice or convenience, and in so doing, the court is authorized to consider whether the new controversy will unduly delay the determination of the main action or prejudice any party to the action. Such motion to dismiss may be made by plaintiff or the third-party defendant, after the third-party defendant has appeared, upon notice to all parties who have appeared.

Subdivision 5 regulates the rendition of a verdict in a case when a verdict in plaintiff's favor against the third-party plaintiff might be rendered upon a ground which would not support the claim asserted by the third-party plaintiff against the third-party defendant, and permits the court to instruct the jury to make, in addition to a general verdict, appropriate special findings with respect to the ground of the third-party plaintiff's liability.

Subdivision 6 extends the "third-party practice" to a third-party defendant as well as to the plaintiff, and permits a third-party defendant to bring in a new third-party and permits a plaintiff, when a counterclaim is asserted against him, the same right.

The new provisions specifically applicable to Third-party Practice are to be found in the new Rule of Civil Practice 54. This rule prescribes the form of the summons issued by "the third-party plaintiff" against "the third-party defendant"; a verified complaint must be served with such summons, "together with copies of all pleadings in the action." Copies of the summons and complaint of the third-party plaintiff must also be served upon the plaintiff or his attorney. The name of the third-party defendant shall be added to the title of the action. Finally, to take care of cases where "the plaintiff" or "a third-party defendant" wishes to bring a "third-party action," it is directed that the prescribed form of summons "shall be amended accordingly."

For the sake of clarity it may be well at this point to identify the various several procedural aspects of this somewhat complicated subject, and then pull them together.

Where "proper" parties have been joined, even though they may be merely "formal" or "nominal" parties, there is no pleading error to correct. If an "indispensable" party has been omitted he must be joined or the proceeding must ultimately be dismissed without prejudice. If a "conditionally necessary" party has been omitted he should be joined, but the court has power to proceed if it should prove impossible to bring him in. "Cross-claims" between those already parties to an action are freely allowed pursuant to Section 264 and "counterclaims," pursuant to Sections 266-271, inclusive. "Third-parties" are impleaded by the new procedure defined in Section 193-a and Rule 54. Those not already parties who desire to be made such may use the remedy of "intervention" provided by Section 193-b.³ In the case of adverse claimants there is the remedy of "interpleader" by separate action or by motion in a pending action, as provided in Sections 285-287 inclusive. Certain rights to contribution as between joint tortfeasors after judgment are regulated by Section 211-a. The various Sections and Rules which govern these allied matters have created a series of procedural devices for bringing about certain practical results. If they can be studied and examined as mechanisms or tools, such as one would find in a well planned factory, practitioners will come to use them with more skill and dispatch.

It is a pity that someone has not yet figured out a means of bringing into one action all those persons who may be liable for damages in an automobile accident. It will be recalled that as far back as 1928 there was added to the Civil Practice Act Section 211-a which permitted contribution by one joint tortfeasor against another where a money judgment had been recovered generally against two or more defendants in an action for a personal injury or for property damage and one of the judgment debtors has paid more than his pro rata share of the judgment. A very serious attempt was made so to construe this section as to permit, in an action by a single plaintiff against a single defendant, an application by defendant to bring in as parties defendant the owners or operators of other automobiles involved in the accident. The Court of Appeals in Fox v. Western New York Motor Lines, Inc. 257 N. Y. 305 (1931) held that this procedure was not permitted by Section 211-a.¹² A reading of the many decisions in the various departments, which preceded the decision of the Court of Appeals in the Fox case, plainly indicates the very substantial practical advantages to be obtained from the procedure of bringing the other parties in.¹³ A number of bills were introduced in the Legislature following the decision by the Court of Appeals in the Fox case¹⁴ but there were so many practical difficulties that none of these bills proved satisfactory. Perhaps a solution will some day be found. It may that things are better left as they are. In any event, it is well to bear in mind that none of the provisions above discussed in connection with Third Party Practice have any relation to the situation presented in the Fox case.

ACTIONS AGAINST PARTNERS OR PERSONS JOINTLY LIABLE

We turn now to certain miscellaneous changes made in 1945. After Section 229-a was added to the Civil Practice Act in 1938, permitting an action of any type to be brought against a partnership and authorizing service of process on less than all of the partners, it was found that certain further changes were desirable and that there should be a closer correlation between the procedure prescribed in the case of partnerships and that used in actions against persons jointly liable, as prescribed by Article 73 of Civil Practice Act.

Accordingly Section 229-a was repealed and a new Section 222-a has taken its place. The new section is entitled "Action or proceeding in partnership name," and it provides that "Two or more persons carrying on business as partners may sue or be sued in their partnership name whether or not such name comprises the names of the persons." This accomplished a major change, in line with Rule 17 (b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Accordingly, an attorney has the alternative, with respect to a partnership plaintiff or a partnership defendant, to include the names of each of the partners or to use the partnership name alone. As it is often difficult to locate with accuracy the names of all the partners, and as it is still possible to use all the names where they are available, this change is a distinct improvement in the practice.

Section 222-a also contains provisions to the effect that service of summons or other process upon any one or more of the partners shall permit execution and collection of the judgment "out of the real and personal property of the partnership and out of the real and personal property of the person summoned, whose name shall be endorsed on the execution."

A further change, while desirable in every way, has led to an inadvertent error of some consequence in one of the sections applicable to actions against joint debtors.

In the formulation of the new Section 222-a relative to partnerships it was found that the old method of marking on the docket the words "not summoned" against the names of those partners upon whom summons was not served would now be putting the cart before the horse. Accordingly, the old practice was eliminated and in lieu thereof Section 222-a now provides that the clerk with whom the judgment-roll is filed must write upon the docket opposite the name of each defendant upon whom the summons was served, the word "summoned."

In the correlation of the provisions relative to partnerships with the article relating to "Actions against persons jointly liable," Section 1197 was amended so as to permit this procedure in any action, "legal or equitable" against two or more defendants upon "a joint obligation, contract or liability." This greatly broadened the scope of old Section 1197. The revision appropriately amended Sections 1197, 1198, 1199 and 1200 with the intention of making the procedure substantially identical with that against partners. In other words it was doubtless the intention to permit a judgment in such an action and an execution collectible against property of any defendant upon whom the summons was served and any property owned jointly by a defendant upon whom summons was served and other defendants jointly liable with him.

It would seem that, by inadvertence, the amendment to Section 1199 failed in part to take cognizance of the fact that judgment docket now contains a designation of the persons "summoned" rather than a designation, as formerly, of those "not summoned."

The point may best be understood by comparing the reading of old Section 1199 with new Section 1199. The old Section is as follows:

"Execution; indorsement; enforcement. An execution upon such a judgment must be issued, in form, against all the defendants; but the attorney for the judgment creditor must indorse thereupon a direction to the sheriff containing the name of each defendant who was not summoned and restricting the enforcement of the execution, as prescribed in this section. An execution against the person issued upon such a judgment shall not be enforced against the person of a defendant whose name is so indorsed thereupon. An execution against property issued upon such a judgment shall not be levied upon the sole property of such a defendant; but it may be collected out of the real and personal property owned by him jointly with the other defendants who were summoned, or with any of them, and out of the real and personal property of the latter, or of any of them."

The new Section reads as follows:

"Execution; indorsement; enforcement. An execution upon such a judgment must be issued, in form, against all the defendants; but the attorney for the judgment creditor must indorse thereupon a direction to the sheriff containing the name of each defendant who was summoned. An execution against the person issued upon such a judgment may be enforced as provided by law against the person of a defendant whose name is so indorsed thereupon. An execution against property issued upon such a judgment may be levied upon the sole property of a defendant whose name is so indorsed thereupon; and it may be collected out of the real and personal property owned by him jointly with the other defendants who were summoned, or with any of them, and out of the real and personal property of the latter, or of any of them."

It will be observed that the "defendant whose name is so indorsed thereupon" is now a person "summoned" rather than a person "not summoned." Accordingly, the word "him," according to the literal reading of the new Section can only mean a defendant "summoned." The result is that if the Section is to be interpreted literally, there is now no provision authorizing the collection of a judgment upon issuance of an execution in an action against persons jointly liable, out of property owned by a person summoned jointly with other defendants who were not summoned. Perhaps the courts realizing that the error was inadvertent, may construe the Section as it was doubtless intended to be written. In any event, this phraseology should be clarified by the present Legislature.

Other changes relative to this same general subject, including changes in the Justice Court Act, will not be discussed as they are all described in detail in the comprehensive recommendations contained in the 11th Annual Report of the Judicial Council."

EXTENSION OF TIME AFTER CORRECTIVE OR REGULATORY MOTION

One of the most vexatious ambiguities arose out of conflicting interpretations of Section 283 as it read before the amendment by the Laws of 1945, Chapter 247, which took effect on March 24, 1945. It will be recalled that, from the time the Civil Practice Act first took effect, this Section provided that "if objections to a pleading, presented by motion be not sustained, the moving party may serve an answer or reply * * * as a matter of right, after the decision of the motion and before the expiration of ten days after service of notice of the entry of the order deciding the motion," unless the objections were found to be frivolous. Anyone reading this section would suppose that it related to any type of motion which contained objections to a pleading, whether these objections were in the nature of the old demurrer or whether they were in the nature of a corrective or regulatory motion such as one to make the pleading more definite and certain, to strike out matter as scandalous, repetitious or otherwise improper. Unfortunately, the situation became complicated by the fact that Section 237 relative to appearances provided in substance that the defendant's appearance must be made by the service of a notice of appearance, a copy of an answer or "a notice of motion raising an objection to the complaint in point of law," and it had been repeatedly held that a motion to make more definite and certain or a motion to strike out irrelevant, redundant, scandalous or repetitious matter did not constitute an appearance. Accordingly, in a case where a motion to make more definite and certain was made on the last day to appear or answer, the plaintiff's attorney returned the papers and proceeded to enter judgment by default. This was in 1923 in the case of 255 Fifth Avenue Corporation v. Freeman, 120 Misc. 472, and the Court held that the service of the motion papers did not entitle the defendant to the extension under Section 283. This was affirmed without opinion by the Appellate Division, First Department, 207 App. Div. 842 and the decision was cited with approval in 1928 in Shipley v. Schmitzer, 224 App. Div. 732. The Appellate Division of the Second Department held the other way in DeGroat v. Brooklyn Daily Times, 203 App. Div. 783.

To resolve this conflict and to establish a more reasonable rule, which might not serve as a mere trap for the unwary, the Legislature, as above stated, in 1945 amended Section 283 so that it now gives the automatic extension where "objections to a pleading, presented by motion for judgment or by corrective or regulatory motion, be not sustained."

In this connection it may be well to express the thought that a statutory scheme which defines a motion for judgment addressed to the complaint as an appearance and a motion addressed to the complaint for the correction of a defect therein as not an appearance is overtechnical and unwise. The whole subject of appearances and jurisdiction is technical enough as it is. Doubtless the problem is not as simple as it sounds and there are many ramifications. It would seem, however, that the subject could profitably be reexamined.

WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL

Another amendment of real practical significance was made in 1945 to Subdivision 5 of Section 426, which applies only to the five counties of the City of New York. This subdivision regulates the procedure in connection with the demand for a jury trial and the manner in which a jury trial may be waived. It is long, technical and confusing. Much of the trouble was caused by the fact that the subdivision, prior to 1945, required the service of a separate demand for a jury trial simultaneously with a note of issue. This was held by the First Department, Appellate Division, to be a final and irreparable waiver irrespective of inadvertence or excusable error." The Second Department, Appellate Division, however, held that the Court had the power to relieve a party from such a waiver, where it could be shown that it was due to inadvertence or excusable error and had caused no undue delay or prejudice to the rights of any other party to the action."

Subdivision 5 of Section 426 as amended permits "demand for trial by jury" to be part of the note of issue and the conflict between the two Departments is resolved by the addition of the following sentence at the end of the subdivision: "The Court in its discretion may relieve a party from a failure to comply with the provisions of this subdivision if no undue delay or prejudice to the rights of another party would result."

It may not be out of place to sound a note which has been referred to in practically every one of the prior addresses of this series. Either one is a believer in the jury system or one is not. I happen to be one of those who not only believes in the system but who regards it as one of the greatest bulwarks of American liberties and one which has more than almost any other provision of law to do with the proper functioning of the democratic process. In recent years a desire for expedition of judicial business, a desire to get convictions in criminal cases at any cost and, to some extent, a belief on the part of the property class that juries are not entirely fair to it has led to a series of laws, of which Subdivision 5 of Section 426, just above discussed, is a typical example restricting and, as I think, emasculating the jury system. In particular protest is made against the blue ribbon juries and against the 5-6 verdicts. There is no point in elaborating on this subject on this occasion, but it seems elementary that a jury should be a true cross section of the community and that a jury is a jury of twelve, the unanimous judgment of all of whom can alone determine questions of fact. To permit ten members of a jury of twelve forthwith and without discussion to impose their will upon the other two is neither sensible nor, in the long run desirable. Perhaps disagreements may thus be reduced to a minimum. Doubtless the decision by a judge without a jury is commonly made with more expedition and dispatch. But the sacrifice of the traditional give and take as between twelve representative members of community life, in a discussion in which all may participate so that the views of this cross section may be truly represented, is not only traditional but also sound and valuable. It is seldom right to alter fundamental principles on the ground of so-called expediency.

NEW SECTION 112-g

In 1946 a new section was added to the Civil Practice Act, reading as follows:

"§112-g. Tender of benefits by party rescinding transaction. A party who has received benefits by reason of a transaction voidable because of fraud, misrepresentation, mistake, duress, infancy or incompetency, and who, in an action or proceeding or by way of defense or counterclaim, seeks rescission, restitution or other relief, dependent upon a determination that such transaction was voidable, shall not be denied relief because of a failure to tender before judgment restoration of such benefits; but the court may make a tender of restoration a condition of its judgment."

The purpose of this section was to make applicable to actions at law the same rules applied in courts of equity that no action for a rescission of a transaction voidable because of fraud, misrepresentation, mistake, duress, infancy or incompetency would fail because of a failure to tender, before judgment, restoration of the benefits received in connection with the transaction sought to be avoided. The section as enacted was added to the group of sections dealing with election of remedies.

The Law Revision Commission made an extended study of this question and reported thereon to the Legislature in 1939 (Legislative Documents 1939, No. 65). At that time the conclusion of the Commission was that the doctrine of election of remedies, within limits, had a practical justification, but there were many instances where the doctrine had been carried beyond the necessities of the situation and substantial injustice had resulted.

The Commission was of the opinion, however, that the decisions made by the Court of Appeals in Schenck v. State Line Telegraph Co., 238 N. Y. 308 (1924) where Judge Cardozo had said "Election of remedies presupposes a right to elect," and in Clark v. Kirby, 243 N. Y. 295 (1926) where Judge Crane had said: "If the remedy chosen be insufficient or inadequate or useless, the rule has not barred the plaintiff from taking other timely methods to obtain his rights" would discourage, and in new and doubtful cases, would restrict, the application of the doctrine. It, therefore, did not recommend any general legislation but confined its recommendations to four instances where the rule, in the opinion of the Commission, had become so imbedded in the law that legislative enactment was required to overcome the effect of prior decisions.

As a result of the Commission's recommendations, Sections 112-a, 112-b, 112-c, and 112-d were added to the Civil Practice Act in 1939. These sections respectively provided that the doctrine of election of remedies would not bar a second action where an unsatisfied judgment had been recovered: (1) where a cause of action existed against several persons and one had been unsuccessfully pursued (§112-a); (2) where a right of action existed against an agent, and his undisclosed principal, and one or the other was first sued (§112-b); (3) where causes of action for conversion or on an express or implied contract existed against several persons and an unsatisfied judgment had been obtained on either theory (§112-c), and finally, in the situation where an action had been unsuccessfully brought on a contract, it was provided that an action to reform the same contract could thereafter be maintained (§112-d).

In 1941 a further section was added, 112-e which provided that a claim for damages for fraud would not be deemed inconsistent with a claim for rescission. The section further provided that entire relief could be obtained in one action.

In 1942 a new Section 112-f was added which provided that relief against mistake would not be denied merely because the mistake had been one of law. In this connection particular attention is called to the word "merely." The section was not intended to provide that every mistake of law would be sufficient to justify recovery, but discretion was given to grant relief if the mistake were of such a nature that relief should be granted, despite the fact that the mistake had been one of law.

The particular amendment enacted in 1946 (§112-g) was designed to overcome the effect of two decisions in the Court of Appeals. E. T. C. Corp. v. Title Guarantee & Trust Company, 271 N. Y. 124 (1936) and Kamerman v. Curtis, 285 N. Y. 221 (1941). These cases held, in substance, that in an action for rescission at law, there must be a tender of benefits received, prior to the institution of the action otherwise the action would fail.

The statute became effective April 10, 1946, upon its approval by the Governor, as by the language of the act, it was provided that "This act shall take effect immediately." The question, therefore, is raised as to whether, in view of this language, it is intended that the statute shall apply to causes of action which came into existence prior to the effective date of the statute; and whether it is applicable to cases pending on that date.

While there is perhaps room for debate as to whether the change is substantive or procedural or a little of both, the language of the Section is such as to make the incidence of its application come at the time of entering the judgment. It is provided that the party "shall not be denied relief." This speaks as of the time of formulating the judgment rather than as of the commencement of the action. Even more forceful is the statement that "the court may make a tender of restoration a condition of its judgment." The entire Section indicates a legislative intent that it be applied to pending cases. Furthermore, the Law Revision Commission seems quite in the right in its insistence that no change of substantive law is made.

Nor is there anything in Shielcrawt v. Moffet (1945), 294 N. Y. 180, to the contrary. In that case the court was greatly influenced by the undue hardship upon a plaintiff who had already gone through all the arduous preparation for trial without any provision of law requiring the posting of a bond to cover the expenses, including legal fees, of the corporation defendant on whose behalf the stockholders' action was brought. The peculiar language of the applicable statutes (General Corporation Law, Secs. 61-a, 61-b) and their historical development were found by the court to indicate an intent to depart from the general rule, particularly as the statute under consideration in the Shielcrawt case provided a remedy where before the statute there was no remedy whatever.

But let us suppose that the pending action was one for "rescission, restitution or other relief," brought just before the Statute of Limitations applicable to the particular cause of action had run, and that prior to the running of the Statute no tender had been made. Let us suppose, further, that the action was commenced either before or after April 10, 1946, when Section 112-g became effective and that no tender was alleged in the complaint and no assertion of the Statute of Limitations in the answer. At the conclusion of the case defendant insists upon a dismissal on the merits for failure to plead or prove a tender. Plaintiff responds by calling the attention of the court to Section 112-g and asks for a conditional judgment as provided in the Section. Defendant in turn asks leave to amend his answer so as to plead the Statute of Limitations as a defense and for leave to present whatever proof may be necessary to support that defense. It would seem that plaintiff is entitled to his conditional judgment. The Section created no new cause of action and the Statute is no defense. It was the "fraud, misrepresentation, mistake, duress, infancy or incompetence" which made the transaction voidable and the tender was fundamentally no more than a circumstance bearing on the relief to be granted. This was so before as well as after the legislature enacted Section 112-g. The change was one of procedure and nothing more. The courts should give such legislation a liberal interpretation in order that justice may be done rather than multiply the technicalities by which justice may be defeated.

By parity of reasoning the Statute of Limitations would in no event constitute a defense in the hypothetical case just given.²⁸

APPELLATE PRACTICE

There has been a further liberalizing of the practice on appeals to void the inadvertent sacrifice of an opportunity for review due to some misunderstanding by counsel with respect to the finality of the order or judgment from which the appeal is to be taken. Moreover, the tendency to take the mystery out of appellate practice has been continued by a complete clarification and restatement of the practice in obtaining stays on appeal, a subject which has probably caused practitioners many a sleepless night.

ADDITION OF SUBDIVISION 5-c TO SECTION 592

Prior to the recent extensive revision of appeal procedure, effective in 1942, an application for leave to appeal to the Court of Appeals could not be made in the Court of Appeals unless an application for leave to appeal had first been made and denied by the Appellate Division. If the application were first denied in the Appellate Division and thereafter the Court of Appeals denied the application for lack of authority on the ground that an appeal would lie only upon certified questions, that ended the matter, since the Appellate Division had already passed on the question.

However, under the recent revision, it is now possible to make the application in the Court of Appeals, in the first instance, for leave to appeal to that Court. If the application were denied, not on the merits, but on the ground that an appeal could be taken only after the certification of questions by the Appellate Division, so much time would have elapsed from the time of the decision of the Appellate Division to the time of the decision of the Court of Appeals, that the Appellate Division would be precluded by the lapse of time from entertaining the motion.

The addition of subdivision 5-c to Section 592 covers this situation. Under it, if an application is made directly to the Court of Appeals and the application is denied or dismissed upon the ground that the appeal will lie only if the Appellate Division certifies questions, an application may now be made to the Appellate Division at the same term or at the term next succeeding that in which the order of the Court of Appeals denied leave to appeal for such reason.

STAYS ON APPEAL

The amendments to the sections dealing with stays on appeal, to a large extent codify and clarify the rules which previously existed with regard to the obtaining of a stay, on an appeal to the Court of Appeals or to the Appellate Division without an order.

Many practitioners were of the opinion that in order to obtain a stay under Sections 594 through 598, as they formerly read, it was necessary not only to perform the acts required by the sections but in addition to obtain an order for a stay. I think that now one can go to the particular sections as they have been amended and from reading them know just what must be done in order to stay execution under a judgment from which an appeal is taken. In addition to clarifying the practice, there have been several important additions effected by the recent amendments.

The most significant change is contained in Section 573 which extends a stay previously obtained until five days after the service of the judgment or order of affirmance. I have many times been on tenter hooks, following an affirmance by the Appellate Division, because I knew that just as soon as the judgment of affirmance was entered my stay disappeared, and I could not obtain a new stay until I had filed my notice of appeal. I could not do that until the judgment was entered. The amendment is a sound one and has long been needed.

Another addition to the law is Section 601. This permits an automatic stay, without an order, if an application to appeal to the Court of Appeals is to be made from a unanimous affirmance or from a reversal where an appeal does not lie without permission. That amendment too, will obviate the necessity for orders to show cause containing intermediate stays pending applications for leave to appeal and will somewhat relieve the pressure in preparing motion papers and briefs on an application for permission to appeal.

Sections 614 and 615 have completely redrafted and similarly clarify the situation with regard to stays in connection with appeals to the Appellate Division. The practice has been completely conformed to the method of obtaining similar stays on an appeal to the Court of Appeals.

There has, however, been no interference with the right to give the usual 30-day stay without security, with which we are all familiar, and that right is expressly continued in Section 615.

MISCELLANEOUS

Passing reference should be made to a few of the remaining changes. In 1945:

(a) A new Section 1169-a of the Civil Practice Act provides that in declaratory judgment actions to declare the validity or nullity of a foreign divorce, obtained by a husband against a wife who had not appeared in the action, the court is now authorized to award any sums necessary to enable the wife to prosecute or defend the action.²⁰

(b) A new Section, 341-a of the Civil Practice Act, provides that written findings and other official records of the death and certain other specified facts by officials or employees of the United States and certain of its administrative agencies authorized to make such findings and records "shall be received in any court, office or other place in this state as evidence" thereof.

(c) The last paragraph of subdivision 1 of Section 922 has been amended to "codify" the ruling made in Garey v. Tobey (1944) 268 App. Div. 853, and discussed in the last address of this series,²¹ that the time within which an action or special proceeding may be commenced to reduce attached property to the sheriff's custody and to collect, receive and enforce debts and choses in action, is not limited to a single extension of 90 days.

In 1946:

(a) The whole body of law applicable to notaries public has been reconsidered and revised. New Sections 100 to 105-a, inclusive, of the Executive Law place the full responsibility for the licensing and disciplining of notaries public upon the Secretary of State. The details are summarized and the various practical problems discussed in several comprehensive and very helpful articles appearing on the editorial page of the New York Journal."

(b) Upon the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the Surrogate's Association Section 354 of the Civil Practice Act, relative to the waiver of the privilege in the case of confidential communications by a deceased patient to a physician or surgeon or a professional or registered nurse, so as to permit any party in interest to waive the privilege in any litigation where the interests of the personal representatives are deemed by the trial judge to be adverse to those of the estate. This change has been long overdue.

(c) Previous uncertainty caused by a conflict of authority has been eliminated by a change in Civil Practice Act Section 1172 which now permits service on the husband in a matrimonial case of an uncertified copy of the judgment or order as a basis for contempt proceedings.

(d) Another conflict in the decisions and practice of the various departments relative to the procedure in entering final judgments in certain matrimonial cases has been eliminated by the amendment of Civil Practice Act, Section 1176 and Subdivision 2 of Section 7-a of the Domestic Relations Law. It is now provided that the interlocutory judgment shall become final automatically after the expiration of three months.

(e) The validity of a provision in a separation agreement for future arbitration of amounts to be paid by the husband for support is now sub judice in the Court of Appeals on the Appeal from a judgment denying such validity in Robinson v. Robinson, 271 App. Div. 98.²²

CONCLUSION

In the two year period under discussion there has been a marked tendency on the part of the Legislature to follow the leadership of the Judicial Council, the Law Revision Commission and the Bar Associations in the matter of amendments to the Civil Practice Act and allied statutes. The influence of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is also clearly apparent. But a return to normalcy will probably bring the same old tinkering that has constituted such an evil influence in the past. There will always be a certain number of persons with political or other influence trying to tamper with the laws regulating civil practice and procedure for the purpose of serving some special interest in some pending or prospective litigation. Despite all the real progress that has been made, the need was never more present than it is today for placing the responsibility for the civil practice with the Court of Appeals. The federal experience has pointed out the road; and it is devoutly to be hoped that the State of New York will follow this leadership.

NOTES

1. 1945—Cornell Law Quarterly, Vol. XXX, No. 4, p. 449, June 1945; 1943—Law Library Journal, Vol. 36, p. 73 (1943); 1941—N. Y. L. J., Feb. 10, 1941, p. 630, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 11, 1941, p. 648, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 13, 1941, p. 670, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 14, 1941, p. 690, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 17, 1941, p. 730, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 18, 1941, p. 748, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 19, 1941, p. 766, col. 1; N. Y. L. J., Feb. 20, 1941, p. 784, col. 1.
2. 12th Annual Report of Judicial Council (1946), p. 59.
3. 11th Annual Report of Judicial Council (1945), pp. 194-5.
4. Karchman v. Karchman, 224 App. Div. 773, 230 N. Y. Supp. 856, revers'g 131 Misc. 462, 227 N. Y. Supp. 194; C. P. A. Section 231 sub. 3 and

- Doctor's Hospital, Inc. v. Kahal*, 155 Misc. 126, 277 N. Y. Supp. 736, aff'd. 155 Misc. 127, 277 N. Y. Supp. 738.
5. 12th Annual Report of Judicial Council (1946), p. 58.
 6. cf. Vehicle and Traffic Law. Section 52 "any such summons against him (a non-resident) which is so served shall be of the same legal force and validity as if served on him personally within the state and within the territorial jurisdiction of the Court from which the summons issues."
 7. Williams v. North Carolina, (1942) 317 U. S. 287; (1944) 325 U. S. 226.
 8. Glaser v. Brand, N. Y. L. J., June 11, 1937, p. 2947, Rosenman, J., aff'd. 253 App. Div. 711, 1 N. Y. S. (2) 646; Williams v. Mittlemann, 259 App. Div. 697, 22 N. Y. S. (2) 822, aff'd. 284 N. Y. 822; American Cities Co. v. Stevenson, 187 Misc. 107, 60 N. Y. S. (2) 685.
 9. 11th Annual Report of Judicial Council (1945), pp. 58-9.
 10. Chapman v. Forbes, 123 N. Y. 532, 538.
 11. Nichols v. Clark, MacMullen & Riley, Inc., 261 N. Y. 118.
 12. The wording of the new Section 193-b permits intervention in actions for a sum of money only, which was not allowed under the old practice.
 13. See also Ward. v. Iroquois Gas Corp., 258 N. Y. 124.
 14. Haines v. Bero Engineering Construction Corp., 230 App. Div. 332, 243 N. Y. Supp. 657 (1930, 4th Dept.); Riley v. Wood, 139 Misc. 314, 248 N. Y. Supp. 326 (1931, Supreme Court, Monroe County); La Lone v. Carlin, 139 Misc. 553, 247 N. Y. Supp. 665 (1931, Supreme Court, Jefferson County); Davis v. Hauk & Schmidt, Inc., 232 App. Div. 556, 250 N. Y. Supp. 537 (1931, 1st Dept); Schenck v. Bradshaw, 233 App. Div. 171, 251 N. Y. Supp. 316 (1931, 3rd Dept.); Dee v. Spenser, 233 App. Div. 217, 251 N. Y. Supp. 311 (1931, 2nd Dept.); Blauvelt v. Village of Nyack, 141 Misc. 730, 252 N. Y. Supp. 746, (1931, Supreme Court, Rockland County).
 15. Senate Int. 84, Jan. 13, 1932; Senate Int. 822, Feb. 9, 1932; Assembly Int. 781, Feb. 3, 1932; Assembly Int. 935, Feb. 9, 1932.
 16. 11th Annual Report of Judicial Council, pp. 223 et seq.
 17. Craig v. The City of New York, 228 App. Div. 275, 239 N. Y. Supp. 328; Goldstein v. Langenieux, 230 App. Div. 445, 245 N. Y. Supp. 222; Keane v. Connecticut Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, 232 App. Div. 655, 247 N. Y. Supp. 1004; Shulberg v. Chemical Bank & Trust Company, 246 App. Div. 807, 285 N. Y. Supp. 1059.

18. New York Investors, Inc. v. Laurelton Homes Inc., 230 App. Div. 712, 243 N. Y. Supp. 246; Schapiro v. National City Bank, 170 Misc. 1065, 11 N. Y. S. (2) 693; Bartless v. Pino-Lytol Chemical Co., Inc., 39 N. Y. S. (2) 355.
19. cf. C. P. A. Sections 245-a, 245-b.
20. cf. Gibson v. Gibson, 179 Misc. 661, 41 N. Y. S. (2) 598, aff'd. 266 App. Div. 975, 44 N. Y. S. (2) 372; Dowsey v. Dowsey, 181 Misc. 253, 43 N. Y. S. (2) 464; Lea v. Lea, 182 Misc. 396, 47 N. Y. S. (2) 645.
21. Cornell Law Quarterly, Vol. XXX, No. 4, p. 449, 459.
22. N. Y. L. J., Aug. 2, 1946, p. 200; N. Y. L. J., Oct. 21, 1946, p. 962; N. Y. L. J., Sept. 23, 1946, p. 563.
23. Reversed, Jan. 9, 1947.

Committee Reports

COMMITTEE ON LAW REFORM

Printed below is the draft of the Committee's bill, approved by the Association, which would effect changes in the statutes of New York State relating to the rule against perpetuities.

AN ACT

TO AMEND THE REAL PROPERTY LAW, AND THE PERSONAL PROPERTY LAW IN RELATION TO FUTURE ESTATES IN REAL OR PERSONAL PROPERTY AND THE RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section forty-two of chapter fifty-two of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine entitled "An Act relating to real property, constituting chapter fifty of the consolidated laws," as amended by chapter two hundred and twenty-nine of the laws of nineteen hundred twenty-nine is hereby amended to read as follows:

"§42. The absolute power of alienation is suspended, when there are no persons in being by whom an absolute fee in possession can be conveyed. Every future estate shall be void in its creation, which shall suspend the absolute power of alienation, by any limitation or condition whatever, for a longer period than during the continuance of not more than either: 1. the lives of one or more of the following persons in being at the creation of the estate, namely, the creator of the estate, the children, descendants, parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood, nephews and nieces of the creator of the estate, and the spouse or former spouse of any of such persons; or in the alternative, 2. any two lives in being at the creation of the estate; except that a contingent remainder in fee may be created on a prior remainder in fee, to take effect in the event that the persons to whom the first remainder is limited, die under the age of twenty-one years, or on any other contingency by which the estate of such persons may be determined before they attain full age. For the purposes of this section, a minority is deemed a part of a life, and not an absolute term equal to the possible duration of such minority. Lives in being or a minority in being shall include a child begotten before the creation of the estate but born thereafter. The terms 'children and descendants' as here used shall include persons who have become such by adoption or have been born out of wedlock."

SECTION 2. Section eleven of chapter forty-five of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An Act relating to personal property, constituting chapter forty-one of the consolidated laws," as amended by chapter two hundred and twenty-nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and twenty-nine, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 11. (Suspension of ownership) Application of rules of real property. (The absolute ownership of personal property shall not be suspended by any limitation or condition, for a longer period than during the continuance and until the termination of not more than two lives in being at the date of the instrument containing such limitation or condition, or, if such instrument be a last will and testament for not more than two lives in being at the death of the testator; except that a contingent gift in remainder may be made on a prior gift in remainder, to take effect in the event that the persons to whom the first remainder is limited die under the age of twenty-one years, or on any other contingency by which the interest of such persons may be determined before they attain full age. For the purposes of this section, a minority is deemed a part of a life, and not an absolute term equal to the possible duration of such minority. Lives in being or a minority in being shall include a child begotten before the creation of the estate but born thereafter. In other respects) Limitations of future (or contingent) interests in personal property (.) are subject to the rules prescribed in relation to future estates in real property. Any estate or interest which, under the rules stated in article three of the real property law, would be void in its creation if the transfer affected real property, is void in its creation if the transfer affects personal property."

SECTION 3. This Act shall take effect September 1, 1947.

NOTE: Italic matter is new. Bracketed matter () is old law to be omitted.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON THE FEDERAL COURTS

REPORT ON ADDITIONAL JUDGESHIPS FOR SOUTHERN DISTRICT

The Committee recommends that the Association adopt a resolution approving the proposed enactment by Congress of legislation that will create an additional judgeship for the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York.

The legislation contemplated would take the form of the repeal of the statutory prohibition against the filling of the vacancy on the bench of that Court caused by the retirement of the late Judge John M. Woolsey on December 31, 1943.

Attached to this report are excerpts from a letter dated January 8, 1947, from Leland L. Tolman, Assistant Chief of the Division of Procedural Studies and Statistics of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, addressed to Paul B. De Witt, Executive Secretary of this Association. This letter sets forth the present composition of the Court and the situation that makes it advisable, in the opinion of the Committee, that Judge Woolsey's former place on the bench be made a permanent one.

In addition to the information derived from this letter, which will not be repeated in this report proper, the Committee had the benefit of consultation with Judge Knox, made direct inquiries as to the Calendar situation, and conferred with other persons familiar with the operation of the Court.

All of the information obtained served to emphasize the serious inadequacy of the number of permanent Judges in this District.

With relation to the visiting Judges from other Districts, it should be pointed out that most of them, however cooperative, are not able adequately to substitute for a permanent Judge. The visiting Judges usually wish to sit in what are considered the less burdensome Parts of the Court and thus deprive the permanent Judges of the periodic relief afforded by assignment of these sessions, leaving the permanent Judges to bear the heavy loads with little intermission. Furthermore, Judge Knox, as Senior Judge, is obliged to spend a large portion of his time in calendar and administrative work of one kind or another, a factor absent from most of the other Districts.

The Judges now sitting on the Court are under great pressure and, as the figures in the attached letter show, are carrying a much heavier load than is carried by Judges in the other Districts or were carried by Judges in this District in the past.

With the best good-will and effort on the part of the permanent and visiting Judges, this pressure inevitably takes its toll on the stamina of the Judges and upon the functioning of the Court. It requires no demonstration to lawyers who practise at that bar that, with an increase in the number of permanent Judges, familiar with the local problems prevailing in this District, there would be more opportunity for that unhurried tempo that should prevail in the Court and that, unfortunately, is not always possible under present conditions.

The need will not be satisfied or nearly satisfied by the filling of Judge Woolsey's judgeship but at least that would help.

Accordingly, the Committee recommends the adoption of the following recital and resolution:

WHEREAS, the need for an additional permanent Judge on the bench of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York by reason of the great pressure under which the present permanent Judges of that bench are obliged to function and the number of visiting Judges upon whom for years it has been necessary to call and in order to permit that Court to function better in all of its parts, be it

RESOLVED, that The Association of the Bar of the City of New York strongly recommends the enactment by Congress of legislation authorizing the appointment of an additional Judge for the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York by the repeal of the statutory prohibition against the filling of the vacancy in that Court caused by the retirement of the late Judge John M. Woolsey on December 31, 1943.

Respectfully submitted,

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON THE FEDERAL COURTS

EDWIN A. FALK, Chairman

CHAUNCEY BELKNAP

WILLIAM C. CHANLER

WILLIAM DEAN EMBREE

CAESAR NOBILETTI

GEORGE ROBERTS

APPENDIX

EXCERPTS FROM LETTER DATED JANUARY 8, 1947, FROM ASSISTANT CHIEF, DIVISION OF PROCEDURAL STUDIES AND STATISTICS, ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES COURTS.

"The Judicial Conference of Senior Circuit Judges at each of its regular sessions, for the past three years, in the fall of 1944, 1945 and 1946, has recommended the repeal of the statutory prohibition against the filling of the vacancy in the district court for the Southern District of New York caused by the retirement of Judge John M. Woolsey on December 31, 1943 . . .

Legislative Situation

"After the spring of 1940 and until Judge Woolsey's retirement, there were 13 authorized judgeships for the district. Section 2 of the Act of May 24, 1940, Ch. 209, 54 Stat. 219, which authorized the creation of the most recent judgeship now held by Judge Bright, contained a proviso: 'that the first vacancy occurring in the office of district judge . . . shall not be filled.' (See U.S.C.A., Title 28 §1, annotations pp. 6 and 7). With Judge Woolsey's retirement in 1943, that proviso became effective and it is still in force. The legislation recommended by the Judicial Conference would remove the bar of the proviso, thus permitting the appointment of a successor to Judge Woolsey.

Authorized Judgeships

"There are now 12 authorized permanent judgeships in the Southern District of New York, four of these were provided for in the Judicial Code of 1911, two more were added as temporary by the Act of September 14, 1922, Ch. 306, Stat. 837, but these were made permanent by the Act of August 19, 1935, Ch. 558, §1, 49 Stat. 659; three were added by the Act of February 26, 1929, Ch. 334, 45 Stat. 1317; two were added by the Act of June 15, 1936, Ch. 544, 49 Stat. 146, and the twelfth was authorized as temporary by the Act of May 31, 1938, Ch. 290, §4, 52 Stat. 585, but it became permanent by the Act of June 8, 1940, Ch. 282, 54 Stat. 253.

"At present, 11 of the 12 authorized permanent judgeships are filled. The one vacancy, caused by the death of Judge Samuel Mendelbaum, on November 20, 1946, has not yet been filled.

Visiting Judges

"The need for legislation to make permanent the 13th judgeship in accordance with the repeated recommendation of the Conference of Senior Circuit Judges is very great indeed.

"Because of its metropolitan location, the district court in the Southern District of New York is unique among federal district courts in the volume and complexity of the litigation that comes before it. For many years, the resident judge-power has been inadequate to keep the dockets current, and visiting judges assigned from other districts have been regularly called upon to assist.

"Throughout each of the court years for at least the past ten years, one and sometimes two of the resident judges of the Eastern District of New York have served in the Southern District by designation of the Senior Circuit Judge under U.S.C. Title 28 §17. In addition, during both the summer vacation period and the regular terms of the court year, one or more judges from districts outside the second circuit and from other districts within the circuit, have at all times been serving in the Southern District under the statute authorizing that practice. No other federal district court has received anything like the amount of outside help in this way that has been required in the Southern District of New York, and without this assistance, the resident judges would have been overwhelmed with the flood of cases that are commenced in their court . . .

Civil Dockets and Calendars

"The continuous need of many years standing for outside assistance would seem to indicate without more that there is ample justification for the provision of at least 13 resident judges in the district. But in spite of the help that is being provided, the condition of the civil dockets in the past two years has become alarmingly and progressively worse and there seems little likelihood that under present conditions it will improve in the near future. The following table of civil cases commenced and terminated during the fiscal years ending on June 30, 1940 through 1946 and pending at the close of each, indicates the nature of the trend:

CIVIL CASES COMMENCED AND TERMINATED IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

From July 1st, 1939, to June 30, 1946

Fiscal Year	Commenced			Terminated			Pending at End of Year
	U. S.	Priv.	Total	U. S.	Priv.	Total	U. S.	Priv.	Total
1940	1,025	2,142	3,167	804	1,957	2,761	1,083	2,830	3,913
1941	1,202	2,395	3,597	1,147	2,276	3,423	1,138	2,949	4,087
1942	761	2,017	2,778	1,052	2,319	3,371	847	2,647	3,494
1943	972	1,977	2,949	800	2,150	2,950	1,019	2,474	3,493
1944	2,664	1,888	4,552	1,673	1,895	3,568	2,010	2,467	4,477
1945	5,011	1,687	6,698	3,684	1,633	5,317	3,337	2,521	5,858
1946	4,827	1,665	6,492	3,550	1,366	4,916	4,614	2,820	7,434

"Since 1943, the number of cases commenced annually during the period has more than doubled, while the number terminated has shown a slower rate of increase and has fallen off in the past year. The resulting tremendous increase in pending cases is due in large part to a huge influx of admiralty proceedings arising chiefly from personal injury and cargo damage in war shipping. 2,054 admiralty cases were filed in the district in 1946, as compared with only 100 in 1941. Although many of these cases will eventually be dismissed, discontinued, or settled or otherwise disposed of without trial, it is certain that a large number of them must be tried and are either ready for trial or can be made ready in short order. Furthermore, even those that will be disposed of by agreement of the parties, will not reach that stage until it is forced upon them by an imminence of trial that is not possible in the present state of the calendar. The congestion of these cases is so great that on December 31, 1946, there were 1,731 of them on the admiralty trial calendar, and it was estimated generally by the calendar commissioner that the time required to reach trial in this calendar after joinder of issue had increased to a minimum of 20 months. While this is in part a temporary aftermath of the war, it is nonetheless acute. Comparable figures for the close of each year since 1940, for the civil jury, civil non-jury, and admiralty calendars, as shown by the following table particularly for the years since 1944, emphasize the seriousness of the present situation:

	CIVIL JURY		CIVIL NON-JURY		ADMIRALTY
	No. cases on calendar	Estimated no. of mos. before trial after J. of I.	No. cases on calendar	Estimated no. of mos. before trial after J. of I.	No. cases on calendar	Estimated no. of mos. before trial after J. of I.
June 30,
1940	794	10	659	8	228	5
1941	720	10	730	8	251	5
1942	457	2	697	8	230	4
1943	220	2	276	2	266	2
1944	324	2	321	1	497	5
1945	473	5	357	5	849	12
1946	676	8	815	7	1,358	15
Dec. 31,
1946	1,044	11	831	11	1,731	20

"Throughout the country as a whole, cases brought by the United States to enforce Price and Rationing regulations have been responsible for almost doubling the number of civil cases brought in the federal trial courts. Thus, from 1941 to 1946, the total number of civil cases commenced in federal district courts throughout the country rose from 28,909 to 57,512, and OPA cases amounted in 1946 to 54% of the latter number. It has been the national experience that OPA cases as a general rule do not constitute the same burden on the court for their disposition as does the average civil case, since most of them are settled or discontinued without requiring trial or other action by the judge. In any event now that price control and rationing are largely discontinued, the burden of enforcement will be rapidly reduced. Thus, this increase generally in civil litigation is not unduly alarming. However, in the Southern District of New York, the proportion of OPA enforcement cases has been considerably smaller than it is in the country as a whole. In the year which ended on June 30, 1946, only 1,866 or 28.7% of the 6,492 civil cases filed in this district were brought to enforce price and rationing regulations.

"Thus, in this district, the increase in litigation in recent years cannot be so largely discounted as it may be in other districts, on account of the ease of disposition of OPA cases. Indeed, as the following table shows, without counting these cases, the total number of civil cases has increased appreciably each year since 1942, which was its low point, until it now exceeds by a considerable margin the pre-war average.

1936-1941 (annual average)	3,279
1942 (actual)	2,778
1943 (actual, without OPA)	2,883
1944 (actual, without OPA)	3,392
1945 (actual, without OPA)	3,916
1946 (actual, without OPA)	4,626

Criminal Dockets

"Statistics regarding the criminal calendar do not indicate that it is unduly congested. The following table of criminal proceedings commenced and terminated during the years ending June 30, 1940-1946 and the proceedings pending at the end of each year show a recent decrease in the number of proceedings filed and defendants involved in them, and a corresponding decrease in the number pending at the year's end.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS COMMENCED AND TERMINATED IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

From July 1st, 1939, to June 30, 1946

	Commenced		Terminated		Pending
	Cases	Defts.	Cases	Defts.	Cases	Defts.
1940	1,243	2,735	1,045	2,258	1,037	3,689
1941	1,095	1,979	1,091	2,399	1,041	3,269
1942	1,150	2,034	1,123	2,011	1,068	2,736*
1943	1,189	1,814	1,211	2,295	1,046	2,255
1944	1,471	1,803	1,512	1,941	1,003	2,117
1945	1,506	1,822	1,565	2,175	946	1,764
1946	1,266	1,745	1,481	2,081	731	1,428

* Adjusted

"Criminal cases are given precedence in the calendars, and their movement is therefore expedited. However, the volume of criminal cases in the district is relatively great and requires a very considerable amount of time and attention. A large number of them involve complex commercial crimes under the mail fraud, anti-trust, narcotics, and conspiracy statutes, and frequently result in trials that are protracted for from one to six months. Each of these long trials consumes most of the time of the judge to whom it is assigned, and when two or three of them are in progress at once, the routine business of the court suffers accordingly. The pending load of criminal cases has been kept at its present comparatively low level only because of the preferred attention which it receives, and the large assistance of visiting judges.

Relative Caseload per Judgeships

"A comparison of the number of civil cases commenced per district judge in the Southern District of New York, and the number commenced per district judge in the country as a whole clearly indicates how disproportionately large under present conditions is the share of the federal judicial work that the resident judges of the Southern District of New York are called upon to perform. In 1946, the civil case load per judge in this district was 69% greater than the national average (541, as compared with 321). Without OPA cases, it was 162% greater (385 compared with 147). The following table shows for the fiscal years 1941 through 1946, the case load per judge in civil and criminal cases for the 84 district courts of the United States (exclusive of the court for the District of Columbia which has general as well as federal jurisdiction), and for the Southern District in particular:

CASE LOAD PER JUDGESHIP

	Civil Cases		Criminal Cases
	84 Dist.	N. Y. Southern	84 Dist.	N. Y. Southern
1941	164	277	164	84
1942	168	214	174	89
1943	158	227	190	92
1944	169	379	211	123
1945	295	558	209	126
1946	321	541	171	106

"Statistics alone cannot fully reflect the complexity and difficulty of the work of this court. Many of the cases require months to try. Because New York is the financial and business center of the country, litigation under the anti-trust laws involving huge financial structures and complex factual and legal questions is continuously before the court. For the same reason the bankruptcy business of the court is probably more involved than that in any other district. Hearings and trials in this class of litigation ordinarily cannot be disposed of quickly. It is not unusual for an interlocutory motion in a civil case to require the close attention of a judge for weeks at a time; for the factual and legal questions which these motions present are likely to be unique and difficult. The tremendous number of admiralty cases is in itself a problem not found elsewhere in the federal system, for the large shipping and mercantile business of the port of New York is responsible for most of them, and there is thus brought into the federal system here a great class of litigation involving seamen and cargos that is similar to ordinary tort and negligence cases not ordinarily within federal jurisdiction, and not found in other districts . . .

"All of these considerations indicate the great and pressing need for additional resident judge-power for the court. The present situation not only injures the public, the lawyers, and the litigants involved in the cases with which the court must deal, but it brings discouragement and undue physical strain to the eleven judges who are now exerting all of their efforts to keep abreast of their work. They deserve at least the material assistance and the psychological support of congressional action to restore their numbers to thirteen, as it was from 1940 until the time of Judge Woolsey's retirement . . ."

The Library

SIDNEY B. HILL, Librarian

A SELECTED LIST OF MATERIALS ON THE DEVELOPMENT AND BACKGROUND OF FEDERAL ADMINISTRATIVE LAW AND PROCEDURE

For more than a decade the legal profession, through the American Bar Association and other organizations, has exerted unrelenting effort to improve the methods of administrative procedure. The profession was rewarded on June 11, 1946, by the approval of Public Law 404 of the 79th Congress, The Administrative Procedure Act. The Committee on Administrative Law of this Association prepared a report containing recommendations on the proposed legislation and circulated this report among the members of the Judiciary Committees of the Senate and House.

The chronology of the legislative history of the major proposals which were considered for the regulation of administrative procedure is of interest to show the line of development from 1937 to the final enactment of Public Law 404—79th Congress.

- 1937 Report of President's Committee on Administrative Management.
- 1938 Senate Hearings on the Proposal for the Creation of an Administrative Court.
- 1939—1940 Walter-Logan Administrative Procedure Bill. Vetoed by President Roosevelt.
- 1941 Final Report of Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure.
- 1941 Senate Judiciary Hearings on S.674, 675 and 918 Growing out of the Work of the Attorney General's Committee.
- 1945 S.7 and H.R. 1203 were introduced.
- 1946 Act signed by the President June 11, 1946.

For a complete legislative history of the Act members are referred to Senate Document no. 248 of the 79th Congress. The complete set of Congressional hearings and reports on the President's reorganization plans of executive agencies from 1939 through 1946 are also available in the Library.

From Goodnow's Comparative Administrative Law, 1893, which is the earliest title in this list, to the latest study of the legislative intent of the Administrative Procedure Act by the Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, the Honorable Pat McCarran, in the December 1946 issue of the American Bar Association Journal, one can trace the nature and growth of the administrative process. That this is an ever-changing process is apparent from the fact that several members of the 80th Congress propose to submit new amendments to this Act.

In addition to the titles listed below, many valuable law review articles, too numerous to list here, will be found in the Index to Legal Periodicals.

American Bar Association—Section of Judicial Administration. Brochure on Administrative Law. Chicago, American Bar Association. 1943. 61p.

American Bar Association. Special Committee on Administrative Law. Legislative Proposal on Federal Administrative Procedure. Chicago, American Bar Association. 1944. 41 p.

Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Administrative Regulation of Private Enterprise. Edited by John Perry Horlacher. 1942. 221 Annals. 256p.

Beck, James Montgomery. Our Wonderland of Bureaucracy; a Study of the Growth of Bureaucracy in the Federal Government and its Destructive Effect upon the Constitution. New York. 1932. 290p.

Beer, Henry Ward. Federal Trade Law and Practice. Chicago, Callaghan and Company. 1942. 999p.

Blachly, Frederick F. & Oatman, Miriam E. Administrative Legislation and Adjudication. Washington, The Brookings Institution. 1934. 296p.

Blachly, Frederick F. & Oatman, Miriam E. Federal Regulatory Action and Control. Washington, The Brookings Institution. 1930. 356p.

- Bureau of National Affairs. Administrative Interpretations. Washington, Bureau of National Affairs. 1937. 572p.
- Caldwell, Lynton Keith. The Administrative Theories of Hamilton and Jefferson. Chicago, Univ. of Chicago Press. 1944. 244p.
- Chamberlain, Joseph P., Dowling, Noel T., Hays, Paul R. The Judicial Function in Federal Administrative Agencies. New York, The Commonwealth Fund. 1942. 258p.
- Clark, Jane Perry. The Rise of a New Federalism. New York, The Columbia Univ. Press. 1938. 347p.
- Comer, John Preston. Legislative Functions of National Administrative Authorities. New York, Columbia Univ. Press. 1927. 247p.
- Commerce Clearing House, Inc. Administrative Procedure; a Handbook of Law and Procedure Before Federal Agencies with Bibliography. Chicago, Commerce Clearing House, Inc. 1944. 192p.
- Commerce Clearing House, Inc. Federal Administrative Procedure; Practice and Procedure Before Federal Agencies. 2nd Ed. Chicago & c., Commerce Clearing House, Inc. 1946. 2v.
- Cushman, Robert E. The Independent Regulatory Commissions. New York & c. Oxford Univ. Press. 1941. 780p.
- Dickinson, John. Administrative Justice and the Supremacy of Law in the United States. Cambridge, Harvard Univ. Press. 1927. 403p.
- Doyle, Wilson K. Independent Commissions in the Federal Government. Chapel Hill, Univ. of North Carolina Press. 1939. 106p.
- Dulles, John Foster. The Effect in Practice of the Report on Administrative Procedure. 1941. 41 Colum. L. Rev. 617-627.
- *Farrington, Robert Leslie. Limitations Upon the Delegation of Power by the Federal Legislature. Washington, Catholic Univ. of America. 1941. 103p.
- Federal Bar Association. Should a Uniform Administrative Procedure Be Prescribed by Statute for All Federal Agencies? Washington, Federal Bar Association. 1945. 47p.
- Federal Bar Association. Committee on Administrative Law. Administrative Procedure. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1939. 9p. (Senate doc. no. 71, 76th Congress, 1st session. 1939)
- Federal Redbook and Practice Annual, 1943. Editor, Sydney C. Schweitzer. 2nd Ed. New York, Baker, Voorhis, & Co. 1943.
- Federal Utility Regulations Annotated. Washington, Public Utilities Reports Inc. 1942. 2v. (With 1944 supplements).
- *Frank, Jerome. If Men Were Angels; Some Aspects of Government in a Democracy. New York, Harper & Brothers. 1942. 380p.

- Frankfurter, Felix & Davison, James Forrester. Cases and Materials on Administrative Law. Chicago & c. Commerce Clearing House. 1935. 651p.
- Freund, Ernst. Administrative Powers over Persons and Property. Chicago, Univ. of Chicago Press. 1928. 620p.
- *Gellhorn, Walter. Administrative Law Cases and Comments. Chicago, Foundation Press. 1940. 1007p.
- Gellhorn, Walter. Federal Administrative Proceedings. Baltimore, The John Hopkins Press. 1941. 150p.
- Gellhorn, Walter. The Problem of Proof in Federal Administrative Practice. Philadelphia Bar Association. 1941. 12p.
- Goodnow, Frank Johnson. The Principles of the Administrative Law of the United States. New York and London, G. P. Putnam's Sons. 1905. 481p.
- Goodnow, Frank Johnson. Comparative Administrative Law. New York and London, G. P. Putnam's Sons. 1893. 2v.
- *Graske, Theodore Wesley. Federal Reference Manual; a Complete Guide to all Federal Departments. Washington, Bureau of National Affairs. 601p. (With 1940 supplement).
- *Griffith, Ernest Stacey. Modern Government in Action. New York, Columbia Univ. Press. 1942. 91p.
- Hart, James. An Introduction to Administrative Law. New York, Crofts Publishing Co. 1940. 621p.
- Henderson, Gerard C. The Federal Trade Commission; a Study in Administrative Law and Procedure. New Haven, Yale Univ. Press. 1927. 382p.
- Herring, E. Pendleton. Federal Commissioners, a Study of Their Careers and Qualifications. Cambridge, Harvard Univ. Press. 1936. 151p.
- Herring, E. Pendleton. Public Administration and the Public Interest. New York & London, McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc. 1936. 416p.
- Landis, James M. The Administrative Process. New Haven, Yale Univ. Press. 1939. 160p.
- *Leiserson, Avery. Administrative Regulation; A Study in Representation of Interest. Chicago, Univ. of Chicago Press. 1942. 292p.
- McFarland, Carl. Administrative Agencies in Government and the Effect Thereon of Constitutional Limitations. 1934. 20 A. B. A. Jour. 612-617.
- McFarland, Carl. Judicial Control of the Federal Trade Commission

* Not in Library.

- and the Interstate Commerce Commission. 1920-1930. Cambridge, Harvard Univ. Press. 1933. 214p.
- MacMahon, Arthur W. & Millett, John D. Federal Administrators. New York, Columbia Univ. Press. 1939. 524p.
- Montague, Gilbert H. Judicial Review Under Federal Administrative Procedure Act of 1946. New York Law Journal, January 7-9, 1947.
- Patterson, Edwin Wilhite. The Insurance Commissioner in the United States. Cambridge, Harvard Univ. Press. 1927. 589p.
- Pike, James A. & Fischer, Henry G. Administrative Law. Albany, Matthew Bender & Company. 1941-46. 4v. (Loose-leaf).
- Pound, Roscoe. Administrative Law. Pittsburgh, Univ. of Pittsburgh Press. 1942. 138p.
- Public Administration Review. Chicago. 1940-46. 6v.
- Schulman, John. Administrative Agencies. New York, Practising Law Institute. 1945. 35p.
- *Sears, Kenneth Craddock. Cases and Materials on Administrative Law. St. Paul, West Publishing Company. 1938. 800p.
- Seymour, Whitney North. Current Developments in Constitutional and Administrative Law. 1942. 35 L. L. J. 484-502.
- Sharfman, I. L. The Interstate Commerce Commission; a Study in Administrative Law and Procedure. New York, The Commonwealth Fund. 1931-37. 4v.
- Stason, E. Blythe. Administrative Law. New York, Published for the Association of American Law Schools by the Practising Law Institute. 1946. p. 35-50 (S. D. 12)
- Stason, E. Blythe. Law of Administrative Tribunals. Chicago, Callaghan and Company. 1937. 755p.
- Stephens, Harold Montelle. Administrative Tribunals and the Rules of Evidence. Cambridge, Harvard Univ. Press. 1933. 128p.
- Turrentine, Lowell. Wartime Legislation and Its Implications for the Future. New York, Published for the Association of American Law Schools by the Practising Law Institute. 1946. p. 1-57 (S. D. 11)
- Uhler, Armin. Review of Administrative Acts. Ann Arbor & Chicago, Univ. of Michigan Press & Callaghan and Company. 1942. 207p.
- United States. Administrative Procedure Act; Legislative History, 79th Congress, 1944-46. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1946. 458p. (Senate doc. no. 248, 79th Congress, 2d. session, 1946).

* Not in Library.

- United States. Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure. Administrative Procedure in Government Agencies. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1941. 14 pts. in lv.
- United States. Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure. Final Report. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1941. 474p. (Senate doc. no. 8, 77th Congress, 1st session, 1941).
- United States. Federal Administrative Agencies; Organization and Procedural Rules. 1946. 11 Federal Register, Sept. 11, 1946. Part 2, Sections 1-4. 966p.
- United States. Government Reports, Office of. A Guide for Federal Executives to Inter-Agency Service Functions, Contracts and Procedures. Washington. 1941. 105p.
- United States. Library of Congress—Division of Bibliography. A List of Recent References on the Reorganization of the Executive Departments. Washington. 1936. 46p.
- United States. President of the United States. Veto Message on H.R. 6324. U. S. Govt. Print. Off. (House doc. 986, 76th Congress, 3d Session, 1940).
- United States. The President's Committee on Administrative Management. Report of the Committee with Studies of Administrative Management in the Federal Government. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1937. 382p.
- United States Government Manual. 1946. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1946.
- United States House Judiciary Committee. Administrative Law; Hearings on H.R. 4236, 6198, 6324 to Provide for More Expeditious Settlement of Disputes with the United States. March 17-April 5, 1939. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1939. 192p.
- United States House Judiciary Committee. Administrative Law. House Report 1149 to accompany H.R. 6324. 2 pts. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1940.
- United States Senate. Annotated Copy of S. 915, to Provide for the More Expeditious Settlement of Disputes with the United States. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1940. 25p. (Senate Doc. no. 145, 76th Congress, 3rd Session, 1940).
- United States Senate Judiciary Committee. Administrative Procedure; Hearings on S. 674, S. 675 and S. 918. April 2-July 2, 1941. 4 pts. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1941. 1621p.
- United States Senate Judiciary Committee. Senate Report 442 to Accompany S. 915 to Provide for More Expeditious Settlement of Disputes with the United States. 1939. 15p.

- United States Senate Judiciary Committee. United States Court of Appeals for Administration; Hearings on S. 3678, April 1-June 1, 1938. 5 pts. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1938. 309p.
- United States Senate. Military Affairs Committee. Government's War-time Research and Development, 1940-44. Survey of Government Agencies and Recommendations. Washington, U. S. Govt. Print. Off. 1945. 326, 14p. (2pts.) (Pursuant to S. Res. 107, 78th Congress and S. Res. 146, 79th Congress).
- Vanderbilt, Arthur T. Administrative Law. Annual Survey of American Law, 1942. p.89-105; 1943. p.101-114; 1944. p.169-213; 1945. p.184-253. New York University School of Law. 1945-46.
- vom Baur, F. Trowbridge. Federal Administrative Law; a Treatise on the Legal Principles Governing the Validity of Action of Federal Administrative Agencies, and of State Agencies on Federal Questions. Chicago, Callaghan and Company. 1942. 2v.

of
e 1,

War-
ent
int.
ress

eri-
945-tise

der-eral